A Glimpse into the Past

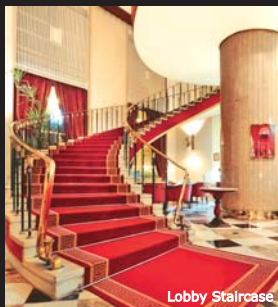

The Shepherd Hotel, standing imperiously on the banks of the River Nile is steeped in history.

Founded in 1841 by the Briton, Samuel Shephard, the building had previously served as the private quarters of Napoleon during his army's invasion of Egypt at the turn of the century. Within 15 years of Shephard taking over, the hotel's reputation had spread as far as England where the Illustrated London News reported: "In no other hotel in the world do you find such an assembly of people of rank and fashion from so many countries."

Nowadays the Shepherd revives the experiences and atmosphere of Cairo's glamorous and colourful past, while providing guests with modern facilities and amenities to guarantee a memorable stay.
